HyperMotion Technology not only uses the data for changes made to player control in FIFA 22, but also for more global gameplay improvements. For example, the simulation of aerial and dive duels is improved, with greater aerodynamic effects. This means that players can be pressured and pressured around the ball, and controlled in close combat. Accurate and high-definition player model

The player models created for FIFA 22 are now even more lifelike thanks to the real-time use of motion capture data. Every time the player takes a breath, every muscle on their body flexes, and every contact point on the body moves. The player models in FIFA 21 had a more realistic appearance, but players were not able to perform in a game with the same intensity or ferocity as they do in real-life. A number of players have commented that the FIFA 21 player models looked very realistic, but it was not possible for them to fight at a high intensity level. To eliminate this, more realistic and more lifelike simulation was used in FIFA 22, which gives players movements that are even more lifelike and realistic than previous editions. Skin The new customisable skin system in FIFA 22 enables players to create their own in-game avatar, or skin. From today, FIFA 22 players will be able to choose any skin from hundreds of FIFA 21-themed digital items available to them at FIFA.com Skins can be mixed and matched to create a series of different variations. For example, players can play in a range of colour combinations including "Borussia Monchengladbach's" red, white, and black jerseys, a traditional English kit inspired by the likes of Manchester United, Manchester City, and Chelsea, or a combination of these. New dynamic player models Play your best game every time. The intensity of every action you take is designed to feel faster, tighter and more explosive. After more than two decades of experience working with real-life data and motion capture, FIFA 22 uses all the player data to heighten the realism and intensity of every game. True-to-life movement The smooth movement of the players as they sprint, struggle to get off the ground, or deal with the contact from a tackle or an aerial duel is the focus of HyperMotion Technology. Players can sprint more powerfully, and they can recover from the ground at a far higher speed

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Enhanced control - Easily navigate and perform tight, delicate moves, especially on the ball as the video tutorial has been re-vamped for the best real-life experience.
- Easier to control - Move the ball with finesse, quickly move the R2 or Pass button to the left or right and replicate the movements of the original player (the standard way it is controlled on consoles).
- Adaptive artificial intelligence (AI) - Move side-to-side smartly to beat the opponent and create space with a smart split-second decision-making algorithm. Past experience also plays a part in creating better players, just like in real-life. Players' attributes are constantly changing and improve from game-to-game, and continuously adapt to how AI has to react in the heat of the moment. Ornerly, arrogant, intelligent (when amused) or a humble superstar (when not).
- Intelligent AI - Players are more intelligent than ever, thanks to powerful team AI. Creative and clever attacking maneuvers and tactical innovations are more fun than ever. Shot-on-goal targets even increase in success rate to top their performance levels.
- Enhanced animations - Players look more realistic, with more animations, cloth, wrinkles, and sweat to reflect every player's individual attributes.
- Team Maker - You can create your ideal team directly from the ground up with Team Maker.
- 99 Ways to Score: When you score the goal, you score 99 different ways on Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC. The best players in the world achieve 99 different ways to score goals, from in-time simple flick shots to stupendous lobs, through breathtaking camera finishes, unconventional off-the-post-scorches with aplomb, and the skills to back it up.
- New Coaching Mechanics - More creative and straightforward to approach, improve dribbling and passing with the new player behaviours and markers. Perfect the art of the ball control, which will lead to less chances on receiving, by playing higher up the pitch. Try new strategies to get the most out of every attack.
